His Honour the LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR, Preſident, GABRIEL MANIGAULT, Eſq; Vice-Preſident, and the Members of the CHARLES TOWN LIBRARY SOCIETY, having favoured the Subſcriber with the Uſe of their LIBRARY-ROOM, for the more convenient Exhibition of his Experiments, and for the better Accommodation of the Ladies and Gentlemen who may be pleaſed to attend his Lectures.

For the ENTERTAINMENT of the

CURIOUS,

Will be exhibited, in the ſaid LIBRARY-ROOM, a Courſe of EXPERIMENTS, in that inſtructive and entertaining branch of natural Philoſophy, call'd ELECTRICITY, to be accompanied with lectures on the nature and properties of Electric Fire.

The COURSE to conſiſt of Two LECTURES.

LECTURE I.

I. OF ELECTRICITY IN GENERAL, with ſome Account of its Diſcovery.

II. Experiments, ſhewing that the electric Fire, commonly produced by the Friction of Glaſs, is not created by that Friction.

III. That it is not extracted out of the Subſtance of the Glaſs.

IV. That it is not collected out of the circumambient Air: But,

V. That it is attracted by the excited Glaſs from the Earth, by Means of intermediate non-electric Matter; the whole terraqueous Globe and every Thing thereon poſſeſſing a large Quantity of it, called the natural Quantity.

VI. That our Bodies contain enough of it, at all Times, to ſet an Houſe on Fire.

VII. That it has when in a ſtate of Reſt, no ſenſible Heat.

VIII. That by it's violent Motion, in paſſing thro' other Bodies, it produces a very intenſe Degree of Heat.

IX. That it is not the ſame with culinary Fire.

X. That it will live in Water as well as in any other Body; and Sparks may be ſeen and felt riſing out of the Water, or even Ice, that will kindle up a burning Flame.

XI. That it is an extremely ſubtle Fluid, paſſing thro' ſo denſe a Body as Metal, with the greateſt Facility; even more readily than thro' any other Matter we are acquainted with.

XII. That ſome Bodies electriſe poſitively, or increaſe the natural Quantity in Bodies, whilſt others electriſe negatively, or diminiſh it.

XIII. That the ſame Body under different Circumſtances may be made to electriſe both poſitively and negatively.

XIV. That Bodies having only their natural Quantity, neither attract nor repel each other.

XV. That Bodies having their natural Quantities equally increaſed or diminiſhed, ſeem to repel each other.

XVI. That this is not a real Repulſion but apparent only: there being no repulſion between electriſed Bodies.

XVII. That Bodies having different Quantities in Proportion to their Magnitude, attract each other, and the greater the Difference, the ſtronger the Attraction.

XVIII. That different Quantities in ſeparate Bodies may be reduced to an Equality, by Means of Metal, in the Form of a ſlender ſharp Point, more readily and at a greater Diſtance than in any other Form.

XIX. A ſurprizing Property of an electric Atmoſphere, whereby Bodies may be electriſed both plus and minus, by the ſame Glaſs and ſame Friction.

XX. An artificial Spider, animated by the Electric Fire ſo as to act like a live one.

XXI. A new Property diſcovered in electriſed Points; by Means of which will be exhibited a Sort of electrical Horſe Race.

XXII. Electriſed Money, which ſcarce any one will take when offer'd to them.

XXIII. The Salute repulſed, or Fire darting from a Lady's Lips or Cheek, ſo that ſhe may defy any Gentleman to ſalute her.

XXIV. Fire darting from a Lady's Eyes, that will kindle Spirits (without a Metaphor.)

XXV. A diverting Experiment, which cannot well be underſtood but by thoſe who try it.

XXVI. A Battery of ſeven Guns, diſcharged by Fire iſſuing out of a Perſon's Finger.

LECTURE II.

I. A Deſcription and Explanation of the famous Leyden Experiment, which is the Foundation of moſt of the principal Improvements that have ſince been made in Electricity.

II. The amazing Force of the Electric Fire in paſſing through a Number of Bodies at the ſame Time.

III. The Electric Fire ſhown to be the ſame with Lightning.

IV. A bright Flaſh of real Lightning darting from a Cloud, in a painted Thunder-Storm.

V. The Cauſe and Effects of Lightning explained.

VI. The Force of a ſmall Quantity of it, making a fair Hole through a Quire of Paper.

VII. An Animal killed by it inſtantaneouſly.

VIII. Metal melted by it on Glaſs, and ſome part of it incorporated with the Subſtance of the Glaſs.

IX. A Wire heated ſo as to become red and burning hot.

X. An Experiment ſhewing why Thunder-Clouds float lower in the Air than other Clouds; and why Eminences are more frequently ſtruck.

XI. Why we have Thunder more frequently in Summer than in Winter.

XII. An Experiment ſhewing that Lightning when it ſtrikes a Houſe, may be prevented from doing the leaſt Damage.

XIII. An Experiment ſhewing what Part of a Houſe or Chamber, not properly ſecured, is ſafeſt to remain in, during a Guſt, or in Caſe of the Houſe's being ſtruck with Lightning.

XIV. An Experiment ſhewing a probable Method of preſerving Houſes, Ships, &c. from being ſtruck with Lightning.

XV. The endeavouring to guard againſt Lightning, in the Manner propoſed, ſhewn not to be chargeable with Preſumption nor inconſiſtent with any of the Principles of natural or revealed Religion.

XVI. The Manner of erecting an apparatus in Houſes for making Experiments on the Poſitive and Negative Electricity of the Clouds in Thunder-Storms, &c. ſhewn by an Experiment, with an exact Repreſentation in Miniature of ſuch an Apparatus.

XVII. A Battery of ſeven Guns, fired by a Spark paſſing through cold Water.

Extract of a Letter from the Havana, dated March 2d, 1765.

"SO much for buſineſs —— Now I muſt inform you of the Spaniards, or rather O'Reily's activity in the military way; my former letters informed you, what vaſt additional fortifications were going on; the whole Cavannas are fortifying, and that in ſuch a manner, that there are two more Moro's a building, and upon the ſame plan, all join to ſecure and defend each other, ſurrounded with dry ditches cut in the rocks, as deep as the Moro itſelf; whether they intend to let the ſea round we here don't know, as no ſtrangers are permitted to go near any part of their works; if the Moro ſide was ſtrong before, 'tis now ten times more ſo, the town ſide alſo will be made as ſtrong as the nature of the ground will admit of, by numbers of forts, lines and intrenchments, all to be mounted with vaſt numbers of cannon; it's ſaid no leſs than 25,000 men are employed in theſe great works; they likewiſe diſcipline the people, and the very negroes ſo ſtrictly, that they perform all parts of the exerciſe, firings and manœuvres as well as the regulars, in ſhort they are kept inceſſantly active, have frequent field days and ſham battles; lately there were 10,000 men drawn out on the plain between the Land-Gate, and a ſmall village called Guadaloupe, 5000 of them commanded by General O'Reily, which was called the Spaniſh army, and 5000 men commanded by one O'Connor, the ſecond in command, which was called the Engliſh army; every body here that could ſtir went out of the town or upon the ramparts, which commanded the field of battle to ſee this ſham fight, where after various marches, countermarches, and variety of other movements, the two armies began to draw near enough to begin firing, in one place you would ſee cloſe ſolid fire, in another one ſide prevailing and the other retreating, then bodies of reſerve retrieving the ground again of the retreating party, another place again different bodies moving with the greateſt quickneſs to get ſome advantageous piece of ground, from which preſently they were beat off again, and ſoon after return to the attack and regain poſſeſſion, this laſted above two hours and an half, and ſometimes the Spaniards retreated, and ſometimes the Engliſh, and 'tis amazing to tell you the emotions this ſham battle and the nominal armies cauſed in the ſpectators; when the Engliſh retreated vaſt ſhouts by the multitude Perro Anglicos, (Engliſh Dogs) a common word with the Spaniards, they fly, when the Engliſh got the advantage there was not ſo much huzzaing, but encouraging the Spaniſh party. In the fort that ſurrounded the ramparts of the town, numbers of common people ſtood, and juſt under the place where I was upon the ramparts, was an Engliſh Tar, belonging to ſome of the merchantmen here; Jack, who was half ſeas over, was vaſtly pleaſed when the Engliſh party prevailed, which drew much the attention of the Spaniards againſt him, and when the Spaniſh party prevailed, the honeſt Tar, with great force of voice would cry out D—n y ur eyes Engliſhmen will you give way, I was highly pleaſed with the true Engliſh ſpirit of honeſt Jack, and the agitation he ſhewed at this conteſt, between the Engliſh and Spaniſh army, but unfortunately for poor Jack, 'twas ordained that at laſt the Engliſh party ſhould retire and fly, upon which, no longer able to contain himſelf, he with a volley of oaths, flings his cap to the ground, and roars out, O! D—n me, if they were a real Engliſh army we ſhould ſoon ſee which would fly, (ye Spaniſh Bougers) on which a Spaniard that underſtood a little Engliſh, was very angry with the ſailor and reprimanded him, upon which Jack cried out, have at you my boy, and knocked the Don down; ſome other Spaniards coming about him, Jack nimbly attacked them, and laid ſome of their honours in the duſt, a ſtout able Spaniard preſuming on his own ability of body, offer'd him battle; Jack ſtriking one of his hands violently againſt the other, cried out, I'm at you my Jewel, and immediately hoiſted Don from the ground, and threw him flat on his back, ſaying boy that is a croſs buttock; upon this a number of Spaniards got about him, and would certainly have ſtuck a ſtiletto into poor Jack, had not an Iriſh officer luckily came up, ſeeing a great crowd (and Jack laying about him, crying out fair play and I'll ſhew you ſport my hearts,) immediately broke through the crowd, and aſked Jack what was the matter, ſays Jack aſk that Don's chops, and his noſe and both that Don's eyes, they will tell you what's the matter; and if your honour will ſtan by me I'll—here Jack had clinch'd his hare fiſt, which made the officer apprehend further miſchief, therefore taking hold of his arm, told him, he muſt know what he was fighting about, why ſays Jack, about Old England, and about King George, Lord bleſs his precious eyes, here Jack's ſpirits roſe above controul, and with his laſt words he knocked down another Don, upon which the officer told him he muſt take him into cuſtody, and that he was his priſoner; this he ſpoke with a ſeeming wrath, fearing the conſequence of their ſtilletoes to poor Jack; Jack ſurrendered ſaying, he was not above being priſoner to an Engliſhman, but blaſt his eyes if he would ſurrender to a Spaniard; the officer then admoniſhed him, and told him war was not declared againſt the Spaniards, that it was now a time of peace, and that Jack muſt behave peaceably, Jack throwing his hat with great violence to the ground, cried out, I declare war myſelf, D—n my eyes if I don't, I'll ſham fight them, I'll learn them to make the Engliſh run, well but Jack ſays the officer, they were nothing but Spaniards that run away; here Jack, putting a large quid in his mouth, replied no more they was not, I knew they could not be Engliſhmen; but come Jack ſays the officer you are my priſoner, and I'll take care to put you ſafe on board your ſhip, the officer took him away and was as good as his word."

Account of a remarkable Robbery in FRANCE,

IN the year 1662, when Paris was afflicted with a long and ſevere famine, Monſieur de Sallo, returning from a ſummer's evening walk, accompanied with only a page, was accoſted by a man, who preſented his piſtol, and, in a manner far from hardened reſolution, aſked him for his money. M. de Sallo, obſerving that he came to the wrong perſon, and that he could obtain but little from him, anſwered, 'I have but three piſtoles about me, which are not worth 'a ſcuffle, ſo much good may do you with them; but, like 'a friend, let me tell you, you are going on in a very bad 'way.' The robber took them, and, without aſking him for more, walked away with an air of dejection and terror.

The fellow was no ſooner gone, than M. de Sallo ordered his page to follow the robber, to obſerve where he went, and to bring him an account of all he ſhould diſcover. The boy obeyed, purſued him through ſeveral obſcure ſtreets, and at length ſaw him enter a baker's ſhop, where he obſerved him change one of the piſtoles, and buy a large brown loaf. With this ſalutary purchaſe the robber went a few doors further, and entering an alley, aſcended ſeveral pair of ſtairs. The boy crept up after him to the topmoſt ſtory, where he ſaw him go into a room, which was no otherwiſe illuminated than by the friendly light of the moon; and, peeping thro' a crevice, he perceived the wretched man caſt it on the floor, and burſting into tears, cry out, 'There eat your fill; this is the deareſt loaf I ever 'bought: I robbed a gentlemen of three piſtoles; let us huſ-'band them well, and let me have no more tearings; for ſoon 'or late theſe doings muſt bring me to ruin.'

Theſe expoſtulations were anſwered by thoſe of the whole family: and his wife, having at length calmed the agony of his mind, took up the loaf, and cutting it, gave four pieces to four poor ſtarving-children.

The page having thus performed his commiſſion, returned home, and gave his maſter an account of all he ſaw and heard. Sallo, who was much moved, (as what chriſtian breaſt can be unmoved at diſtreſs like this) commanded the boy to call him at five next morning. This humane gentlemen aroſe, and took his boy with him to ſhew him the way; he enquired of his neighbours the character of a man who lived in ſuch a garret, with a wife and four children, by whom he was informed, that was a very induſtrious man, a tender huſband, and a quiet neighbour; that his occupation was a ſhoe-maker, and that he was a neat workman, but was overburthened with a family, ſtruggled hard to live in ſuch dear times.

Satisfied with this account, M. de Sallo aſcended to the ſhoemaker's lodging, and knocking at the door, it was opened by the unhappy man himſelf, who knowing him at firſt ſight to be the gentleman he had robbed, proſtrated himſelf at his feet. M. de Sallo deſired him to make no noiſe, aſſuring him he had not the leaſt intention to hurt him. 'You have a good character (ſaid he) amongſt your neighbours muſt expect your life 'will be cut ſhort, if you are ſo wicked as to continue the free-'doms you took with me. Hold your hand; here are thirty 'piſtoles to buy leather; huſband it well, and ſet your children 'a laudable example. To put you out of further temptations to 'commit ſuch ruinous and fatal actions, I will encourage your 'induſtry. I hear you are a neat workman, and you ſhall take 'meaſure of me and my lad for two pair of ſhoes each, and he 'ſhall call upon you for them.'

The whole family ſeemed abſorbed in joy, amazement, and gratitude, and in ſome meaſure deprived them of ſpeech. M. de Sallo departed greatly moved, and with a mind replete with ſatisfaction, a having ſaved a man, and perhaps a family, from the commiſſion of guilt, from an ignominious death, and perhaps from everlaſting damnation. Never was a day much better begun; the conſciouſneſs of having performed ſuch an action, whenever it recurs to the mind of a rational being, muſt be attended with pleaſure; and that ſelf complacency and ſecret approbation, which is more deſireable than gold, and all the opulence of the Eaſt, will be the attendant on ſo much benevolence.

MR. JOHN DUTARQUE'S HOUSE in Ansonborough, with a large GARDEN, To be Lett. Enquire of Theodore Gaillard, jun. tf.

CHARLES-TOWN, MAY 11, 1765.

WE are informed, from authority that seems pretty good, that a large body of native Mexicans joined with some Creole Spaniards, have lately revolved from the Spanish government, and made themselves masters of the capital (Merida we suppose) of Mexico; and that they pursued the viceroy from thence quite to La Vera Cruz, which they have likewise besieged. This news was brot by a snow packet-boat from the last named port, dispatched to Monte-Christi, &c. for assistance to crush this rebellion.

The only article of public intelligence from Falmouth, by Capt. Gunn, that seems worth notice, is that of the death of the right honourable HENRY FOX, Lord Holland, on the 23d of February last: He was clerk of the pells in Ireland, pay-master-general of the army, and one of his Majesty's most honourable privy-council.

ALEXANDER MIDDLETON, Esq; Post-Master-General of the ceded Islands, arrived at Grenada the 14th of March last.

The Suffolk packet-boat, Captain James Bull, sailed from Jamaica the 8th of last month, for Pensacola, and may be daily expected here.

On Sunday the 5th instant, Mr. ANDREW REID, was married to Miss ELIZABETH SARRAZIN.

* * Advertisements left out this week, will be in our next.

Charles-Town, May 4th, 1765.

AS the time I have undertaken to inspect INDICO for sale in this town, at one per cent. expired the 25th of March past; it is necessary I should acquaint the public, that it will not hereafter suit me to do the same for less than two dollars per hundred; and that, for sorting, garbling and sealing Indico, from those whose names are not in my register for the three last crops, I shall expect five per cent. on invoice, provided they signify their intention to employ me, before the 20th of July next, accompanied with a ten pounds bill.

If after this offer, any should have reason to complain that their Indico, sent home without my seal and certificate, is a drug there, they must blame themselves for presuming it would be otherwise.

At the same time, I would advise all persons who have Indico damped or purposely wetted, or who jumble the 1st, 2d and 3d sorts together, in order to impose on purchasers, not to offer the same for my inspection; as I am determined always to publish my opinion of such parcels, with the names of the makers, or venders, in the very next gazette, to prevent its being any longer thought at home that, by my silence, I am the father of, or countenance, all the iniquitous practices which have been committed with Carolina Indico.

At the same time, he begs leave to return his thanks to all who have hitherto favoured him with their commands; and as he is a piece of a seaman, and always looked upon plain sailing to be the safest and surest in navigation, so in life, or the business of it, he would advise the soliciting gentlemen to steer a more steady course in future.
